Acknowledgement of Country

The Department of Education acknowledges the Traditional Owners of the lands from across Queensland and pays respect to the Elders — past and present — for they hold the memories, traditions, the culture and hopes of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples across the state.

A better understanding and respect for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures develops an enriched appreciation of Australia’s cultural heritage and can lead to reconciliation.

This is essential to the maturity of Australia as a nation and fundamental to the development of an Australian identity.

We are committed to delivering aspirational, educational, economic and social outcomes for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

We all have a role in creating workplaces, schools and communities that value, support and uphold the rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Our challenges

We will meet our challenges to:

- respond to a fast changing world
- reduce the impact of disadvantage
- prepare young people for the future
- provide for a diverse and growing population
- attract and develop a skilled workforce

The world around us is changing at an unprecedented pace and scale.

Rethinking the way we approach education, learning, and working now and in the future will be essential for us to become more agile in a constantly changing environment.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children, those living in the most disadvantaged locations, and children who are not proficient in English are more likely to experience developmental vulnerability.

We will reduce the impact of disadvantage and vulnerability through targeted intervention, culturally appropriate services, and support for those who need it most.

Preparing young people for the future is a challenge that is more complex now than it has ever been before.

Inspiring children to be lifelong learners, and building resilience and critical thinking will be essential for young people to adapt to an uncertain future, and be prepared for jobs that do not exist yet.

Providing for a growing population expected to cluster in our major cities, while balancing support for the unique challenges facing those living, working and learning in rural and remote locations remains a challenge.

We will continue to embrace all cultures, languages, abilities and identities for everyone to participate and prosper equally in Queensland’s future.

With changing workforce expectations, the rise of innovative technologies and non-traditional ways of working, we are challenged to find new ways to adapt in the digital age.

We are committed to building a diverse and capable workforce by attracting and supporting people from all backgrounds, experiences, cultures and identities.
Our opportunities

We will embrace opportunities to innovate through:

<th>evidence-informed decisions</th>

<td>By knowing our students and community well, and providing a personalised approach to their learning and development, we will support each and every child to achieve their full potential.</td>
<td>Through our strategies, we have an opportunity to foster stronger community, industry and government relationships and work closely together to improve student and community wellbeing.</td>
<td>Whether it be in the classroom or the workplace, technology provides opportunities to change the way we teach, learn and work, and is a tool to increase engagement, improve knowledge retention and encourage individual learning.</td>
<td>Integrated place-based responses allow us to respond to complex, interrelated or challenging issues such as disadvantage through collaborative efforts of community, stakeholders, industry and government.</td>
<td>Using research and evidence-based decisions ensures we are informed in our approach and integrate new thinking and action into everyday practice.</td>

Accountability and performance

Good governance is essential to achieving our purpose and objectives. It helps set the direction for our work, supports accountability, and drives high performance.

Legislative and regulatory compliance is the department’s first line of defence in managing risk. As its foundation, the department has a core requirement to comply with its legislative obligations in its pursuit of quality outcomes for children, students and the community.

We use evidence that balances opportunity and risk to inform our decisions. We are willing to accept a higher level of risk when pursuing innovation and opportunities that further our strategic objectives.

The department has the lowest appetite for risks associated with:
- safety of children and students
- workplace health and safety of its staff and the community
- security of confidential and personal information
- fraud and corruption.

Our values are:

- Customer first
- Be courageous
- Ideas into action
- Empower people
- Unleash potential
- Work safe, learn safe, be safe

Department of Education | Strategic Plan 2019–2023
Delivering our strategy

Our strategic plan outlines our priorities for Queensland through our four strategic objectives:

- a great start for all children
- every student succeeding
- safe and fair workplaces and communities
- capable and confident people delivering responsive services.

Operational planning

We put our strategic plan into action through operational planning within each division or branch, region, and school.

Operational plans detail the services, strategies, projects and initiatives we are delivering over the coming year. They also form the foundation for individual performance and development plans that outline the vital contribution of every employee, every day, achieving our vision for Queensland.

Progress towards achieving our strategic objectives is measured through quarterly governance reporting to the Executive Management Board and mid-year reviews of operational plans, and is reported in the department’s Annual Report.

Progress towards achieving the government’s commitments and objectives for the community are reported in Our Future State.
