Freshwater State School – multi-purpose hall

The Queensland Government is planning to deliver a new multi-purpose hall for Freshwater State School

The Queensland Government has committed to providing a new multi-purpose hall for the school, and in consultation with the school community through the establishment of the Freshwater State School New Multi-purpose Hall Internal Consultative Group, revisited location and design options during late 2025.

As a result of the comprehensive community consultation undertaken, the consultative group's preferred location for the hall was endorsed by the government's education Service Planning and Development Board.

The redesign of the proposed multi-purpose hall has been completed and a construction contract will be awarded mid-year. Early works in preparation for construction to start mid-2026, will begin in June and will include the removal of two trees and the trimming of others. The removal of the two trees – a Mango and a Damson Plum tree – is necessary due to the redesign of the hall and the Building Code requirements, and is aligned with the Consultative Group's preferred location option which, "preserves the most useable amount of existing green space and mature trees"[1].

As part of the hall's construction works, additional trees along Corkill Street will be removed and replanted with appropriate species once construction is completed.

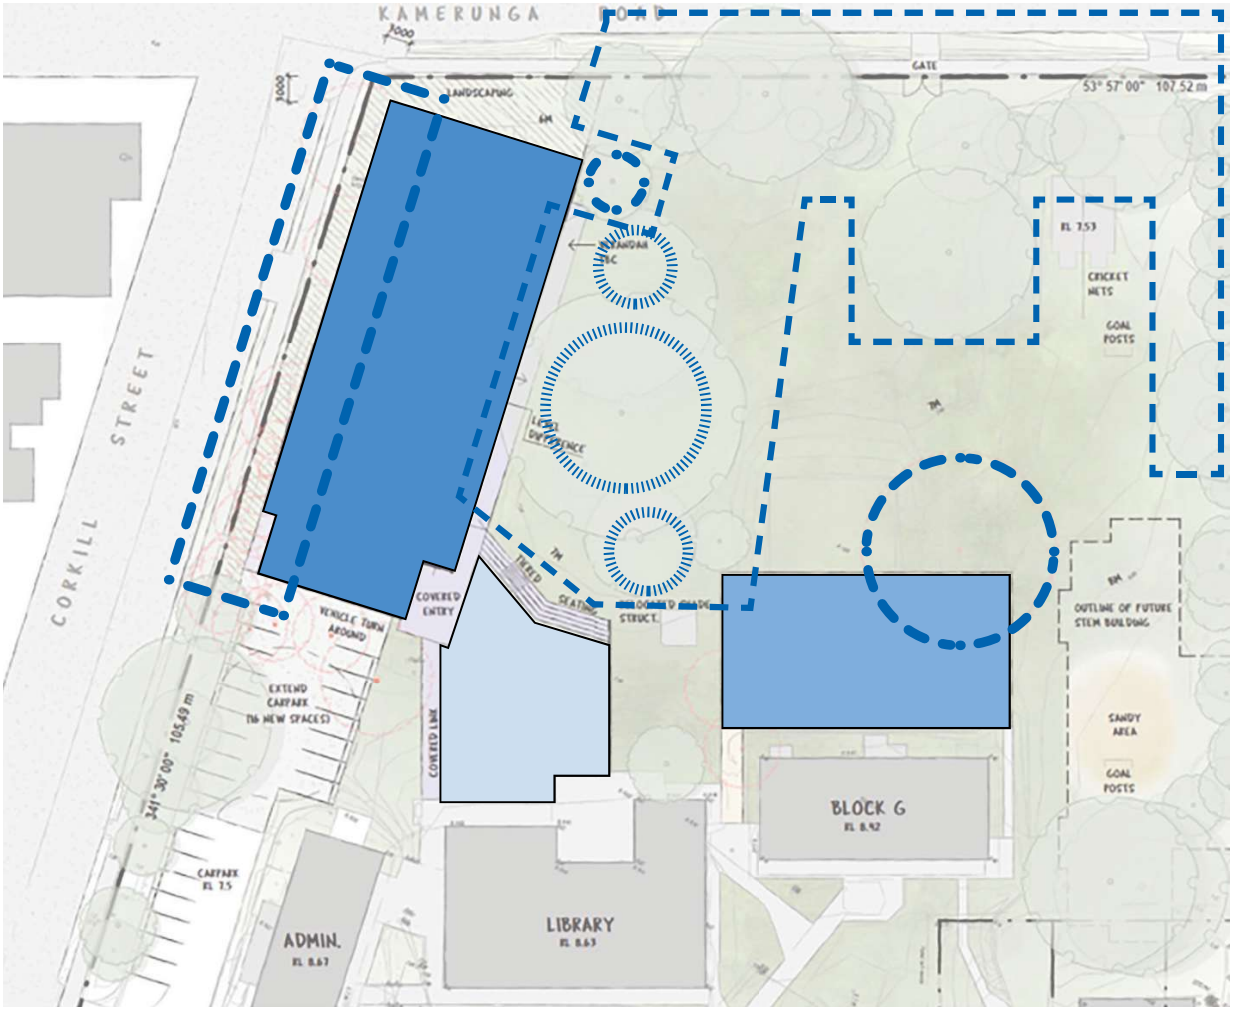

The new hall will include:

- a single multi-purpose court
- a performance stage/dance studio
- storage
- a kiosk
- a multi-purpose room
- student and staff amenities
- the relocation of the grounds person shed
- solar panel installation
- a new hard cover for existing courts.
